

Jessica Law is a Senior Physiotherapist at National University Hospital. She was awarded the Ministry of Health Holdings Healthcare & Nursing Scholarship in 2010 and graduated from the University of Sydney with a Bachelor of Applied Sciences (Physiotherapy) with First Class Honours. She is currently specialising in Vestibular, Neurological and Geriatric Rehabilitation and has a keen interest in research in these fields. Under the Learning Development Award by NUH, she completed the Vestibular Rehabilitation: A Competency-based Course by Duke University and underwent clinical observations in Emory Hospital, Cincinnati Children's Hospital and Boston Children's Hospital in 2023.

Her research posters have been presented at various local and international conferences including World Confederation for Physical Therapy Congress, Australasian Lymphology Association Conference and Singapore International Physiotherapy Congress. Jessica is also passionate in clinical education, and was awarded the Star Educator Award by NUH in 2021.